

Press Club Adds Scholarships: Honors Quigley

A record number of excellent applications for Press Club and Journalism Foundation scholarships have been received this year, according to Claudia Burris, Press Club's vice president of scholarships and internships. Burris, along with judging panelists Rick Stoff, Joe Kenny and representatives from Journalism Foundation funders, will recognize the winners at a luncheon on July 18 at the Norman Probstain Golf Clubhouse in Forest Park.

Martin P. Quigley
(1913-2000)

Our Press Club has also added several new scholarships. Of special note is the Martin P. Quigley Journalism Scholarship to be given by his daughter, Katy Gurley, in commemoration of Quigley's 100th birth year. One of the original Press Club founders, Quigley was a St. Louis public relations super-star. A graduate of the University of Minnesota Journalism School, he began his career as a newspaper reporter. In World War II, he served in the Army Air Force as a photographer and reporter and also wrote segments of Roosevelt's "Fireside Chat" radio addresses. His civilian career in public relations began in New York, followed by a move to Los Angeles for the Ford Foundation. St. Louis became his home in 1953 when he joined Fleishman-Hillard as a senior partner. His key clients included the Cardinals baseball team, Budweiser, Blue-Cross/Blue Shield, and Emerson Electric. In 1956, he took a one-year leave to serve as KETC's general manager. A prolific writer, Quigley also wrote four novels, scripts for two local musicals, and countless magazine articles. His retirement job in 1980 was as editor of the former Midwest Motorist. Contributions to the Quigley Scholarship Fund can be made at stlpressclub.org or my mail to the Press Club.

Two new $1,000 scholarships have been established to provide internship archival assistance for the Media Archives at the St. Louis Public Library. Earlier this spring, the Press Club and St. Louis Post-Dispatch donated $5,000 to the Missouri School of Journalism for the David S. Lipman Journalism Scholarship, which will go to Marcie Veit -- a rising junior majoring in print and digital news. Alexy Irving, Webster University, was the club’s spring intern and received a $1,000 scholarship. Press Club also donated $1,000 to Mathews-Dickey Boys’ and Girls’ Club for a “Sky’s the Limit” scholarship given to Amber Lowery.

Missouri Hall of Fame Honors Photojournalists

By Ben Manhanke, Press Club Summer Intern

Helping to preserve and honor the work of Missouri photojournalists since its establishment in 2005, the Missouri Photojournalism Hall of Fame recognizes the contributions and accomplishments of local newsmen.

The Missouri Photojournalism Hall of Fame, brainchild of Bill Miller Sr., Editor-in-Chief of the Washington Missourian, provides a space in which to showcase the work of both current and pioneering photojournalists from the Show-Me-State. Miller said the goal of the Hall is to recognize outstanding photojournalists, those who often get overlooked for their contributions to journalism.

Located in downtown Washington, Mo., the Hall of Fame was made possible through a number of contributors including the Missouri Press Association, the University of Missouri School of Journalism and the city of Washington. Miller said he knows of no earlier efforts to erect a similar organization in Missouri prior to this venture.

Each fall the Hall of Fame inducts several new photojournalists and incorporates their work into the Hall's exhibit. Inductees are recognized for their accomplishments in one or more of the following categories: outstanding photojournalism achievement, long-term photography for a Missouri publication or other journalism outfit, leadership in education, technical innovations, ethical values and integrity and contributions to community.

Candidates, living or deceased, may be nominated by anyone either through the University of Missouri School of Journalism or the MPA. The final decision of who is to be inducted into the Hall of Fame is made by a selection committee headed by David Rees, chair of the photojournalism faculty at the University of Missouri School of Journalism and Cliff Schiappa, a retired Associated Press photographer and photo editor.

Those inducted into the Hall of Fame in 2012 included Wiley Price, recipient of more than 80 photojournalism awards from state and national newspaper associations; Lee Battaglia, one of the founding editors for the Smithsonian's Air and Space magazine and Jean Shifrin, the highly decorated, first female photojournalist to work at the St. Joseph News Press.

Nominations for a given year are due by April 30, with this year's inductees to be announced later this summer.

Miller said currently he is trying to obtain a grant to fund the construction of a new, permanent home in Washington for the Hall of Fame so as to no longer have to rent the space the Hall currently occupies.

He said some thought has also been given to moving the hall to Columbia, Mo., at or near the University of Missouri School of Journalism where it could be utilized as a teaching tool and would most likely receive more visitors. As of yet, however, no such space has been located.

For more information about visiting the Missouri Photojournalism Hall of Fame or how you can nominate an individual to be inducted, you can go to the Missouri Press Association website:

or contact the Hall of Fame at (636)239-7575.
